“ As a Baby David, I remember how you loved baseball so much. Always had a ball with you. Couldn't talk about much when you were a little guy but you sure could talk baseball.

“ Some time has passed since David's death. Even still, it's hard to believe I'll never see him again. I stare at his picture everyday and cry. I think of the recent memories we created and I cry more. I loved my brother so much. I would have done anything for him. If he wanted me to buy Mountain Dew Pitch Black pop so he could drink it all day, I would. If he wanted to go to Thirsty Thursday's to meet some girls, I'd take him. I'd do anything for him.

When I came to the hospital and my uncle told me he was gone, I cried. I felt so short of breathe like a part of my soul was ripped out. I sat and watched him as he laid there with all the tubes running in and out of his body. I kept touching and kissing his face, It was unreal. He was really laying there dead.

Now all I have are his memories. I have the best memories of him and I will never let them go. I love him forever.
