“ I met Keith in 1966 at Saint Fidelis Seminary. He was eight days older than me, and we hit it off right away. Every night all the seminarians said prayers at about 9:00 PM. Once they were finished, the Great Silence began. We were not allowed to talk again until after prayers at breakfast. Keith and I decided that a couple of 14 year olds should be able to talk, so we snuck out of the dormitory and made our way to the oldest building on campus. It had a bell tower, and somehow we found the door to climb to the top. We found one of those tiny television sets up there. It had rabbit ears with aluminum foil wrapped around both antenna to get better reception. We watched TV for about an hour but started thinking we'd get in trouble and better get back to the dorm. He was my partner in mischief and may God rest his soul.
