“ Pap,

You were more than my grandfather. You were my friend. I will cherish the relationship we had. I will tell Adam all about you. You loved him so much, he will know that he stole your blue eyes. Thank you pap. Thank you for always being there for me. For loving me unconditionally. Every year at the super bowl I will think of you. I will think of you all the time. When it's rainy, I'll remember how you'd say your sinus bothered you. And when it's sunny I'll remember your smile. I love you forever pap pap. ❤️

“ Dad,

The difficult part is over, but the hard part is not having you here. I miss calling you on my way home from work. I never thought this, but I miss your comments or advice that I used to get upset about. "Patti Ann I'm telling you, please listen to what I am telling you." There were times I would think, you know you're not going to like what dad has to say, but yet, I would still call you. I would give anything to hear those words. From being asked to help get your boots off to holding your hand and giving you one last hug and everything in between, I love you dad from the depths of my soul. You will always be my everything! Rest easy dad, I have everything under control.
