“ This is a little tribute that I posted on my FB page: Yesterday, many mourned the passing of Kobe Bryant and his daughter. They viewed him as their hero and I'm sure he was not just because of his prowess on the court but what he did beyond. However, there are many other heroes who pass and they don't receive the accolades. Yesterday, I found out that a dear lady, a friend, passed away on Saturday. We taught together at Allderdice HS and stayed in touch through Facebook after we both retired. Suzanne would frequently reply with a little note of appreciation for the daily prayer that I posted. Many times with a ❤️ or a 🌸. So today, when I posted the prayer, I just felt the need to write a little piece honoring one of the quiet heroes. Suzanne taught English classes. Her students were frequently the most challenging. She never raised her voice, lost her patience, got angry...she always smiled. I wonder if any of those students, years later, appreciated what she tried to do. After retirement, Suzanne worked as a teacher's aide at her local Catholic school. Those were happy times for her and she was saddened when her doctor told her that she had to quit because of her COPD. I'm sure she made an impact on the lives of many little children. I will always remember her smile, her quiet demeanor. I know that she's one of the angels in Heaven. With all that she went through in her life, I imagine that she got a golden ticket to go straight through. Rest well, dear Suzanne...you deserve it. ❤️ 🌸

“ Liz, my condolences, prayers and love go to you and your family. Suzanne was a real gem and what will always stay with me is her smile and her sincerity. I know that she went directly to heaven. Love to all of you. I will not be able to make it due to some health problems but my love and prayers will. Angie Bodrog
